Neidpath Castle. This ruined fortress is built on a rock beside the River Tweed, one mile from Peebles. It was originally the property of the Hay family, and in 1650 was held by Lord Yester for King Charles, but was eventually taken by Cromwell, who destroyed the main tower. In the 18th century it was occupied by the Earls of March, and the "Maid of Neidpath," celebrated by Scott, was the daughter of one of these earls.
